

Classroom Management for New or Struggling Teachers

One of the most important things a new teacher must learn is classroom management. Students will take advantage of a teacher who does not understand what needs to be done to keep students actively involved in the curriculum and classroom assignments.

Presentation resource:

Neil Donovan, CTDSL in the Western Region, has developed a well-received presentation on classroom management. He is available to present to your staff, especially new teachers, on how to create a classroom culture of mutual respect and an approach to managing classroom disruption. As a former alternative education teacher during his career, Mr. Donovan understands what needs to be done to maintain control of the class. And, as an experienced CTE Director, he knows how to motivate and talk with teachers, so they are comfortable to interact with him in his sessions. If your school has an interest in the presentation, work through your CTDSL or contact Mr. Donovan directly at njd1957@gmail.com.
